Gender Inequalities, Households and the Production of Well-Being in Modern Europe

Edited by Tindara Addabbo, University of Modena and Reggio Emilia, Italy, Marie-Pierre Arrizabalaga, Université de Cergy-Pontoise, France, Cristina Borderías, University of Barcelona, Spain and Alastair Owens, Queen Mary University of London, UK

Demographic change and economic liberalization are reshaping European states in a number of profound ways. In particular, an ageing population and shifts in the labour market are bringing new challenges to the nation states welfare systems. This unique volume of essays seeks to analyze these changes within the wider historical and geographical context whilst also considering the impact of gender.
